ANDREW JOHNSON.

How Senators Should be Elected-About His Military Governorship-He is for Greeley.

He Accepts the Nomination, and will Stand by the People-He Goes into the Hottest of the Conflict.

We have already given, by telegraph, a synopsis of the proceedings of the great mass meeting held at Nashville on Saturday last, at which ex-President Johnson announced himself a candidate for Congress from the State at large.
Fully ten thousand persons were present, and the torchlight procession included delegations from all the trades, bearing banners and transparencies.

in his speech in the Exposition Build-When we go back to the days of Clay, Cal boun, Wetster and Benton, we find hat the United States Senate, that dignified body was the pride of the nation. But it has now dwarfed into mean in-significance through the trickery and connivance of honest men. Whoever has the largest purse is the man who is to get to be United States Senator in these days when corruption, that terrible usurper of people's rights, reigns supreme. What would you suggest as a remedy for this. Bring the power of representation before the people, and give them the right to elect their Senative before the people and give them the right to elect their Senative before the people and give them the right to elect their Senative before the people and give them the right to elect their Senative before the people and were enthusiastically received by the entire population.

I found the suffering wives and children of soldiers who had been conscripted into the army. In order to alleviate their sufferings I levied a tax upon the men who had paid to stay at home, with such results as you all know. In levying this contribution it was said that I was "feathering my own nest." The truth is, that not a single cent of this money is any Confederate soldier who says that it was sayed through my hands. If there is any Confederate soldier who says that it was sayed as a special telegram for a Cincinnati mentioned in connection with the late troubles here, has not been concerned in the affair at all, and desires that his name be in no way used in their recital.
